Fund update

The overall stance of the investment strategy at present is slightly cautious, reflecting the very low yields available in fixed income markets. Our concern is not that yields might suddenly rise (or prices fall) sharply from current levels, but rather that overall value is poor on a longer term view. At present fixed interest prices are supported by a search for yield in a low interest rate environment and the effects of the European Central Bank's quantitative easing programme, but in due course steadier economic growth could cause yields to move gradually higher. Within the portfolio there is a bias towards corporate bonds relative to gilts, overall the portfolio has a maturity profile slightly shorter than that of the benchmark.
