As part of their community focus as a Performing Arts College, Malmesbury Secondary School is liaising with the WOMAD Foundation (a charitable organisation) and five local Primary Schools (Malmesbury CE, St Joseph's, Lea and Garsdon, Brinkworth/Earl Danby's) to bring a group of Zimbabwean musicians and dancers to work with children. Four members of Siyaya will stay in the area, being hosted free by local families and spend half a day in each school. During that time, the performers will give a music and dance presentation to all of the children and also work with a smaller group who have been selected to join a school choir. Joint rehearsals of all of these children are planned to be held weekly at Malmesbury Primary School who will learn a selection of Siyaya's songs. On 21st July, all of the school choirs will join the whole of Siyaya (15 performers) to sing in Malmesbury Abbey and then go on to perform with Siyaya at the WOMAD festival at Charlton Park on 24th July. The community will benefit from the young people and their teachers having an increased awareness of other cultures, very different from their own. Members of the community will also be able to see the performances in the Abbey (an activity welcomed by the vicar – Rev Neill Archer) and the talents of our local school children and their teachers shown to a wider audience at WOMAD. Approximately 2000 children will benefit from this project.

WOMAD intends to use Charlton Park in Malmesbury for its UK festival site for the next four years. Like it or not, it can bring a huge amount of multi-cultural and artistic benefits to Malmesbury. There is a lot of enthusiasm in several local schools to take advantage of the opportunities to work with the artists of world renown who are visiting our area. In 2007, children from three local Primary Schools sang with The Blind Boys of Alabama and this year it is intended that five schools should join in. Planning meetings have been held between school governors, local teachers and the WOMAD Foundation. Staff from all the six schools are fully involved and parents will be notified. The governors of Malmesbury Secondary School are underwriting this project financially to a limited degree as part of their support of community events and Malmesbury Carnival Committee has allocated £1000. However, there is still a shortfall, which is why this application is being made.
